

CREATING PLAYFUL, FUN, AND EFFECTIVE USER EXPERIENCES

Seductive

INTERACTION
DESIGN

Stephen P. Anderson

CREATING PLAYFUL, FUN, AND EFFECTIVE USER EXPERIENCES

Seductive

INTERACTION
DESIGN

Stephen P. Anderson

Seductive Interaction Design: Creating Playful, Fun, and Effective User Experiences, Portable Document

Table of Contents

Contents

Prologue

1 Why Seductive Interactions?

LinkedIn and Profile Completeness

Why seduction?

The iLike story

Beyond usability

It's all about experiences

SECTION ONE: Aesthetics, Beauty, and Behavior

2 Why Aesthetics?

What's the connection?

Why aesthetics?

3 Are You Easily Understood?

Gestalt Psychology and a drinking game

4 Are You Attractive?

You remind me of

Can you trust me on this?

Perceptions of time

Put it all together

"Attractive things work better"

Stitching it all together

Table of Contents

5 Who Do You Remind People Of?

- Aesthetics, associations, and Apple
- Advertising and coded iconic messages
- Positive and negative associations
- Language and associations
- Applications

6 When Aesthetics Aren't Attractive

- Curious implication 1: The good, the bad, and the ugly
- Curious implication 2: When utility is beautiful
- Curious implication 3: Context and character
- Curious implication 4: Is beauty subjective?
- Closing

7 The Power of Faces

- Leaving your friends
- Summary

SECTION TWO: Playful Seduction

8 Are You Fun To Be Around?

- Use humor, when appropriate
- A Case for humor: MailChimp
- Why bother making someone smile?

9 Are You Unpredictable?

- Mixing surprise with rewards
- Delighters
- My personal annual travel report

10 Are You Stimulating?

- Will the real Dopplr logo please stand up?

11 Are You Mysterious?

- Curious marketing
- Venturing into the unknown

Table of Contents

The information gap theory

Business application?

Specific motivation

Now what?

12 Can People Express Themselves Around You?

SECTION THREE: The Subtle Art of Seduction

13 Small First Steps

Shaping the path

Making a commitment

Sharing places

Picking up items placed on hold

Completing a travel booking

Endowed progress effect

Sequencing

Shaping

14 Coming on Too Strong (and how not to!)

Fewer options

Less text

Fun distractions

Creating the illusion of less by hiding information

Hacking the visual system to make things simpler

Less to think about

15 Attracting Attention

Contrast and characters

Shh! We're hoping no one notices

Did you see that?

16 The Path of Least Resistance

Default options

The power of suggestion

Table of Contents

Convenience and personalized recommendations

Afraid to let go

17 The Influence of Words

Framing

Anchoring

Let's get personal

Clear language

18 An Eye for Details

Step one: Role-play the interaction

Step two: Script the narrative experience

Step three: Break down compound requests into simple next steps

Step four: Minimize choices (at each moment in time)

Step five: Look for micromoments

Step six: Choose clicks over characters

Connecting Behavior Goals with Business Goals

SECTION FOUR: The Game of Seduction

19 Real World Games

Games are first and foremost about fun

The elements of game design

20 A Challenge Worth Pursuing

Back to the classroom

A real challenge

A quick note on status

Challenges vs. goals

Closing

21 Making Things Difficult

Playing hard to get

Using scarcity in commerce

Using scarcity to increase quality

Table of Contents

Using scarcity to encourage participation

Why scarcity works

Other forms of scarcity: Limited duration

Limited access

Choice and calculations

22 How Are We Doing?

Unintended side effects of hypermiling

A little perspective

Serious games

Making a game out of e-mail

Closing

23 What's the Prize?

Why do game mechanics work?

Performance goals

Are you offering your users any performance goals?

The fun layer: Narrative, story, aesthetics

Closing

24 Let's Get Serious

The Kano model

25 Only the Beginning

The Rider and the Elephant

The Behavior Grid

BJ Fogg on the Behavior Model

A sense of purpose

One thing everyone is doing

"Show me the money!"

Who's on your site?

Final thoughts

Index

Table of Contents