

RESEARCHING AND WRITING A DISSERTATION

AN ESSENTIAL GUIDE
FOR BUSINESS STUDENTS

COLIN FISHER

THIRD EDITION

Researching and Writing a Dissertation

Researching and Writing a Dissertation

Table of Contents

Front Cover

Researching and Writing a Dissertation

Contents

Acknowledgements

Introduction

- Who is this guide for?

- What does doing a dissertation involve?

- The process of doing a dissertation

- What does working at Masters level mean?

- The assessment criteria

- The learning outcomes and assessment criteria

- Jargon, isms and ologies

- How to use this guide

- Suggested reading

- Other recommended books

- References

Choosing a topic and designing the project

- Introduction

- Choosing a topic

- Criteria for choosing a topic

- A six-stage process for choosing your topic

- Designing your project

- Modes of knowledge

- The researchers role

Table of Contents

Methodological stance

Breadth or depth

Choice of research methods

Ethical considerations

Writing the research proposal

Summary

Suggested reading

References

Writing a critical literature review

Introduction

The sources

Searching for literature

Mapping and describing the literature

Describing the literature

Assessing the quality of an article or book

Forensic critique

Soundness of arguments

Evaluating arguments

Radical critique

The critical approach by Alistair Mutch

Developing a radical critique

Summary

Suggested reading

References

Concepts, conceptual frameworks and theories

Introduction

The roles of theory and conceptual frameworks

Developing conceptual frameworks

Table of Contents

Defining concepts

Conceptual frameworks

Theories

Seeking inspiration: using your intellectual baggage

Examples of the use of conceptual frameworks

An example of conceptualising and theorising in a study of organisational cultures

Another example

Summary

Suggested reading

References

Collecting and analysing research material

Introduction

Discoverers

Structure of the chapter

The range of research methods

Interviews

Panels

Questionnaires

Documentary research

Observational research

Deciding whether to use open or pre-structured methods

Planning and setting milestones

Exploratory research methods

Collecting the material

Interpretive approaches

Analysing the material

Survey research methods: pre-coded and structured research methods

Collecting the material

Table of Contents

Analysing the material: basic statistical analysis of data by Diannah Lowry

Summary

Suggested reading

References

Interpreting the research material

Introduction

Choosing an interpretive grid

Styles of interpretive grid and the problem of universals

Realism

Nominalism

Critical realism

Mixing interpretive grids

The validity and authenticity of research material

Saying what you mean

Saying what is valid

Improving the validity of research findings

Dialectical critique

Framing conclusions and recommendations

Problems of implementation

Accepting the limitations

Summary

Suggested reading

References

Framing arguments and writing up

Introduction

Structuring your dissertation

Writing a thesis, not just a dissertation

Constructing arguments

Table of Contents

Constructing dialectical arguments

Supporting your arguments

Style guide

Dissertation, report and paper specifications

Style hints

Summary

Suggested reading

References

Using software for research

Introduction

Using Minitab and SPSS to analyse survey results by John Buglear

Software for analysing qualitative material by Carole Tansley

Summary

References

Index

Back Cover