

Second Edition

DOING RESEARCH IN BUSINESS AND MANAGEMENT

An essential guide to planning your project

Mark Saunders
Philip Lewis

Doing Research in Business and Management

Doing Research in Business and Management

Table of Contents

Cover

Title Page

Copyright Page

Brief Contents

Contents

About this text

About the authors

Acknowledgements

1 Choosing your research topic

1.1 Why you should read this chapter

1.2 Why choosing the right research topic is so important

1.3 Why choosing a research topic is difficult

1.4 Ten ways to generate ideas for a research topic

1.5 How to refine research topic ideas

1.6 What makes a good research topic?

1.7 How to turn a research idea into a research project

Summary

Thinking about your research topic

References

2 Reviewing the literature critically

2.1 Why you should read this chapter

2.2 What a critical literature review is

Table of Contents

2.3 Why it is important to review the literature critically

2.4 The types of literature available to you

2.5 Searching for and obtaining literature

2.6 Evaluating the usefulness of literature to your research

2.7 Reading, noting and correctly referencing useful literature

2.8 Drafting your critical literature review

Summary

Thinking about your critical literature review

References

3 Managing the research process

3.1 Why you should read this chapter

3.2 Getting access to your research organisation, respondents and participants

3.3 What about access to information?

3.4 Six strategies for making sure that you get the organisational access you want

3.5 Managing yourself

3.6 Managing your supervisor

3.7 Managing your university

3.8 The ethics of doing research

Summary

Thinking about your research process

References

4 Using secondary data

4.1 Why you should read this chapter

4.2 Forms secondary data can take

4.3 The potential of secondary data

4.4 Possible pitfalls of using secondary data

Table of Contents

4.5 Assessing the suitability of secondary data

4.6 Where and how to find secondary data

Summary

Thinking about using secondary data

References

5 Choosing your research design

5.1 Why you should read this chapter

5.2 The importance of research philosophy

5.3 Differing approaches to theory development: deduction, induction and abduction

5.4 Differing purposes: exploratory, descriptive and explanatory studies

5.5 Differing strategies

5.6 Making sure your research conclusions are believable

Summary

Thinking about your research design

References

6 Collecting data

6.1 Why you should read this chapter

6.2 Selecting samples

6.3 Collecting data using questionnaires

6.4 Collecting data using semi-structured or unstructured interviews

6.5 Collecting data using observation

Summary

Thinking about collecting data

References

7 Analysing data

7.1 Why you should read this chapter

Table of Contents

7.2 Different types of data

7.3 Analysing data quantitatively

7.4 Analysing data qualitatively

Summary

Thinking about analysing data

References

8 Writing and presenting the research proposal

8.1 Why you should read this chapter

8.2 The importance of the research proposal

8.3 When you should write your research proposal

8.4 What you should include in your research proposal

8.5 The style you should use to write your research proposal

8.6 How your research proposal will be judged

Summary

Thinking about your research proposal

References

Appendix 1: How to reference

Bibliography

Index