

FOURTH EDITION

Marketing Management

A RELATIONSHIP
APPROACH

Svend Hollensen

Marketing Management

Table of Contents

Front Cover

Brief Contents

Contents

Guided tour

Preface

Digital resources

Chapter 1: Introduction

1.1: Introduction

1.2: The marketing management process

Marketing strategy

Marketing plan

Strengths of the hierarchical approach to marketing planning

Weaknesses of the hierarchical approach to marketing planning

1.3: The traditional (transactional) marketing (TM) concept versus the relationship marketing (RM) concept

The traditional (transactional) marketing concept

The relationship marketing (RM) concept

Importance of customer retention: a case study of how to bridge the gap between TM and RM

1.4: Balancing the transactional and relationship concepts throughout the book

1.5: How the RM concept influences the traditional marketing concept

Product

Price

Distribution

Communication (promotion)

1.6: Different organisational forms of RM

1.7: Summary

Case study 1.1: Hunter Boot Ltd: the iconic British brand is moving into

Table of Contents

exclusive fashion

Part I: Assessing the competitiveness of the firm (internal)

Part I: Video case study: BYD electrical cars: the Chinese electric car manufacturer is considering sales worldwide

Introduction to Part I

Chapter 2: Identification of the firms core competences

2.1: Introduction

From capability to advantage

2.2: Roots of competitive advantage

2.3: The resource-based view (RBV)

Resources

Competence

Exhibit 2.1: Hondas competences in small engines

2.4: Market orientation view (MOV) compared to the resource -based view

Exploitation versus exploration

2.5: The value chain-based view (VBV)

The value chain

Exhibit 2.2: Nikes value chain

Customer value proposition (CVP)

Exhibit 2.3: The value chain of Acme Axles, Inc.

2.6: Value shop and the service value chain

Combining the product value chain and the service value chain

2.7: Internationalising the value chain

International configuration and coordination of activities

2.8: The virtual value chain

Online customer value proposition (OCVP)

2.9: Experiential marketing

Augmented reality (AR)

2.10: Artificial intelligence (AI) and its influence on marketing

Exhibit 2.4: IKEAs use of AR

2.11: Summary

Exhibit 2.5: Harley-Davidsons use of AI in New York

Case study 2.1: Electrolux

Chapter 3: Development of the firms competitive advantage

3.1: Introduction

3.2: General sources of competitive advantage

Table of Contents

Economies of scale (efficiencies of global scale and volume)

Economies of scope (transfer of resources, experience, ideas and successful concepts across products and markets)

Time-based competition (TBC)

3.3: Introduction of a holistic model of competitiveness: from macro to micro level

Individual competitiveness and time-based competition

3.4: Analysis of national competitiveness (Porters diamond)

Factor conditions

Demand conditions

Related and supporting industries

Firm strategy, structure and rivalry

Government

Chance

The double diamond and multiple diamond framework

3.5: Competition analysis in an industry

Market competitors

Suppliers

Buyers

Substitutes

New entrants

Strategic groups

The collaborative five sources model

3.6: Value chain analysis

The competitive triangle

Competitive benchmarking

3.7: Blue ocean strategy and value innovation

Value innovation

3.8: The sharing economy

Exhibit 3.1: Value innovation at hotel chain Formule 1

3.9: Summary

Analysis of national/regional competitiveness

Competition analysis

Value chain analysis

Case study 3.1: Nintendo Switch: Is this the Blue Ocean come-back

Part II: Assessing the external marketing situation

Part II: Video case study: Müller yogurts are penetrating the US market by the Muller Quaker Joint Venture and exit again two years later

Introduction to Part II

Table of Contents

Chapter 4: Customer behaviour

4.1: Introduction

Types of E-Commerce

4.2: Consumer B2C decision making

Determinants of consumer involvement

The consumer buying process

4.3: Influences on consumers decision making

Needs

Perception

Memory

Attitudes

Socio-demographic variables

Family life cycle (FLC)

Social networks

Exhibit 4.1: Example of loyalty: store loyalty versus brand loyalty

4.4: Organisational B2B decision making

Identifying buyers in organisational markets

Buying situations

4.5: Influences on the buying process

Environmental forces

Organisational forces

Group forces

Individual forces

4.6: Customer-perceived value and customer satisfaction

Measuring customer satisfaction/customer value

Customer satisfaction, loyalty and bonding

Increasing customer skills through investments in customers

4.7: Customisation tailoring the offer to the individual customer

The challenges of customisation

4.8: 3-D Printing a possible new industrial revolution in customisation

4.9: Gamification and its use for marketers

Exhibit 4.2: Coca Cola Israel increases its sales of their mini bottle through a Mini Me 3-D Print campaign

4.10: Summary

Exhibit 4.3: Niantic brings Pokémon Go games to McDonalds and Starbucks

Case study 4.1: Spotify: The online music-streaming company is growing fast but is suffering financial imbalance

Chapter 5: Competitor analysis and intelligence

5.1: Introduction

Table of Contents

5.2: Who are our competitors?

5.3: How are the competitors interacting?

5.4: How do we learn about our competitors?

Proactive or reactive CI

Formal or informal CI

Exhibit 5.1: McDonalds and Burger King in an asymmetric interaction

Why the internet is a good source of CI

Types of CI available

5.5: What are the strengths and weaknesses of our competitors?

5.6: Market commonality and resource commonality

5.7: What are the objectives and strategies of our competitors?

Assessing competitors current strategies

The four Ps

5.8: What are the response patterns of our competitors?

Exhibit 5.2: Role play in CI as a predictor of competitive behaviour

5.9: Six steps to competitor analysis

1: Identifying your companys competitors

2: Identifying the information required and the information sources of competitor intelligence

3: Analysing strengths and weaknesses of competitors with respect to the market requirements

4: Assessing the companys competitive position vis-à-vis key competitors

5: Investigating the goals and long-term strategies of competitors

6: Selecting the company strategies to compete against the competitor, locally and globally, taking into account possible competitor reactions

5.10: How can we set up an organisation for competitor analysis and CI?

Exhibit 5.3: Counterintelligence done by Johnson Controls against Honeywell

Expanded human resources/single responsibility

5.11: Summary

Case study 5.1: Cereal Partners Worldwide (CPW): The no. 2 world player is challenging the no. 1 Kellogg

Chapter 6: Analysing relationships in the value chain

6.1: Introduction

6.2: The value net

Exhibit 6.1: Value chain of Braun (Oral-B) electric toothbrush

6.3: Relationships with customers

Exhibit 6.2: Value net of Braun (Oral-B) electric toothbrush

Developing buyerseller relationships the marriage metaphor

Buyerseller relationships in a cross-cultural perspective

Distance reduction in international strategic alliances

Table of Contents

The nature of the customer and the behaviour spectrum

Implications for relationship marketing strategies

Behavioural conditions in buyerseller relationships

Exhibit 6.3: Speedos relations with its retailers

Relationships in B2B markets versus B2C markets

One-to-one marketing relationships

Bonding in buyerseller relationships

6.4: Relationships with suppliers

Reverse marketing

6.5: Relationships with complementors/partners

Y coalitions

Exhibit 6.4: Irn-Brus distributor alliance (Y coalition) with Pepsi Bottling Group (PBG in Russia)

X coalitions

Co-branding

Ingredient branding

6.6: Relationships with competitors

Exhibit 6.5: Value net cooperation/coopetition between competitors within each airline alliance. The three alliances are competing against each other

6.7: Internal marketing (IM) relationships

6.8: Summary

Case study 6.1: ARM : challenging Intel in the world market of computer chips

Part III: Developing marketing strategies

Part III: Video case study: Nivea: Segmentation of the sun-care market

Introduction to Part III

Chapter 7: SWOT analysis, strategic marketing planning and portfolio analysis

7.1: Introduction

7.2: Corporate mission

7.3: Swot analysis

Conditions for an effective and productive SWOT analysis

SWOT-driven strategic marketing planning

7.4: Corporate objectives

7.5: Corporate growth strategy

Market penetration

Market development

Geographic expansion

Product development

Diversification

Table of Contents

7.6: SBU marketing strategy/portfolio analysis

Product life cycle (PLC)

7.7: Introduction to portfolio models

7.8: The Boston Consulting Groups growthshare matrix the BCG model

Market growth rate

Relative market shares

Strategy implications of BCG

The relationship between the BCG model and the concept of PLC

The advantages of the BCG model

The disadvantages of the BCG model

7.9: General electric market attractiveness business position matrix (ge matrix)

Compiling the GE matrix

Advantages and disadvantages of the GE matrix

7.10: International portfolio analysis

7.11: Portfolio analysis of supplier relationships

Why are there so many advocates of the relationship focus in marketing?

Strategic implications of the suppliers portfolio

7.12: Summary

Case study 7.1: William Demant hearing aids

Chapter 8: Segmentation, targeting, positioning and competitive strategies

8.1: Introduction

Pitfalls with segmentation

Factors favouring market segmentation

Factors discouraging market segmentation

Requirements for effective market segmentation

Two common segmenting methods

Identifying segmentation variables

8.2: Segmentation in the B2C market

Exhibit 8.1: Segmentation in the pet food market

The sociodemographic variables

Behaviouristic variables

Psychographic variables

Benefits-sought variables

Multidimensional segmentation

8.3: Segmentation in the B2B market

Exhibit 8.2: Segmentation in work (salty snacks in the workplace)

Bonoma and Shapiros (1983) macro-/micro-segmentation process

A relationship approach to B2B segmentation

Table of Contents

8.4: Target marketing

Undifferentiated (mass) marketing

Differentiated marketing

Concentrated (niche) marketing

8.5: Positioning

Exhibit 8.3: Björn Borgs brand positioning and business modelling in the international apparel market

8.6: Generic competitive strategies

Cost leadership

Differentiation

Differentiation focus

Cost focus

8.7: Offensive and defensive competitive strategies

Exhibit 8.4: Good-enough markets in China the case of Duracell batteries

Offensive strategies

Defensive strategies

8.8: Summary

Case study 8.1: LEGO Friends: One of the worlds largest toy manufacturer moves into the girls domain

Chapter 9: CSR strategy and the sustainable global value chain

9.1: Introduction

Definition of CSR

9.2: Different levels of ethical behaviour

9.3: Social marketing as part of CSR

9.4: Cause-related marketing

9.5: Identification of stakeholders in CSR

Exhibit 9.1: Examples of cause-related marketing campaigns

9.6: Drivers of CSR

Long-term benefit drivers of CSR

9.7: The sustainable global value chain (SGV C)

9.8: CSR and international competitiveness

CSR benefits

CSR costs

9.9 The Triple Bottom Line (TBL)

9.10: Poverty (BOP market) as a market opportunity

The poor as consumers

The poor as marketers of products and services

Exhibit 9.2: Grameen Danone Foods opens plant in Bangladesh

Table of Contents

9.11: The green market as a business opportunity

Enviropreneur marketing

Global warming (climate change)

Exhibit 9.3: Unilevers introduction of Comfort One Rinse saves water

Segmenting the green consumer market

9.12: Summary

Case study 9.1: YouthAIDS: social marketing in a private, non-profit organisation

Part IV: Developing marketing programmes

Part IV: Video case study: Tequila Avión: A premium tequila is introduced

Introduction to part IV

The extended marketing mix

Participants

Process

Physical evidence

Chapter 10: Establishing, developing and managing buyerseller relationships

10.1: Introduction

10.2: Building buyerseller relationships in B2B markets

10.3: Relationship quality

10.4: Building buyerseller relationships in B2C markets

Exhibit 10.1: Husqvarnas consumer wheel

Exhibit 10.2: Employee commitment drives value at Southwest Airlines

10.5: Managing loyalty

Steps in a loyalty-based relationship strategy

Exhibit 10.3: Developing service loyalty at Volkswagen

10.6: The crm path to long-term customer loyalty and advocacy

Stage 1: Customer acquisition (the courtship)

Stage 2: Customer retention (the relationship)

Stage 3: Strategic customer care (the marriage)

Stage 4: Customer advocacy (the marriage)

10.7: Key account management (kam)

Implementation of KAM

Customer-complaint management in KAM

The dyadic development of KAM

KAM effectiveness and performance

10.8: Summary

Case study 10.1: Dassault Falcon: the private business jet, Falcon, is navigating in the global corporate business sector

Table of Contents

Chapter 11: Product and service decisions

11.1: Introduction

What is a product?

Importance of service

11.2: The components of the product offer

11.3: Service strategies

Characteristics of services

The Service-Dominant logic (S-D logic)

Global marketing of services

Categories of service

Determining the service quality gap

Exhibit 11.1: Hilti is selling the use not the product

After-sales services (AS)

Full-service contracts

e-Services

Service in the business-to-business market

11.4: New product development (NPD)

The multiple-convergent process model

Product platform/modularity in NPD

11.5: The product life cycle

Limitations of the product life cycle

Technological life cycle

Crowdsourcing

Exhibit 11.2: Threadless T-shirt crowdsourcing business

11.6: New products for the international market

Developing new products/cutting the time-to-market

Degrees of product newness

11.7: Product cannibalisation

Conditions for successful cannibalisation

11.8: Product positioning

11.9: Branding

Branding decisions

Exhibit 11.3: Roundup a global brand for multiple markets

Exhibit 11.4: Kellogg is under pressure to produce Aldis own-label goods

11.10: Brand equity

Definitions of brand equity

11.11: Implications of the internet for product decisions

Customisation and closer relationships

Table of Contents

Dynamic customisation of product and services

11.12: Global mobile app marketing

11.13: Internet of Things (IoT) and its use for marketers

Exhibit 11.5: Googles use of IoT in form of the smart thermostat, Nest

What opportunities does IoT provide for future marketers?

The marketers use of IoT

11.14: Long tail strategies

11.15: Summary

Case study 11.1: Tinder the famous dating app brand is facing increasing competition from e.g. Badoo

Chapter 12: Pricing decisions

12.1: Introduction

12.2: Pricing from an economists perspective

Competitor price response

Exhibit 12.1: Johnnie Walker whisky faced positive price elasticity in Japan

12.3: Pricing from an accountants perspective

Break-even market share

12.4: A pricing framework

Firm-level factors

Product factors

Environmental factors

Market factors

12.5: Market value-based pricing versus cost-based pricing

Value-based pricing

Value pricing based on total cost of ownership

12.6: Pricing services versus physical products

12.7: Pricing new products

Skimming vs penetration pricing

Exhibit 12.2: Value-based pricing in Bossard the 15/85 rule

Market pricing

12.8: Price changes

12.9: Experience curve pricing

12.10: Product line pricing

Freemium

12.11: Price bundling

12.12: Dynamic pricing for different segments

Geographic segments

Table of Contents

Usage segments

Time segments (off-peak pricing)

Demographic segments

12.13: Subscription-based pricing

Subscription pricing strategies

Exhibit 12.3: Dollar Shave Club

12.14: Relationship pricing

Establishing global pricing contracts (GPCs)

12.15: Pricing on the internet

12.16: Communicating prices to the target markets

12.17: Summary

Case study 12.1: Harley-Davidson: How should the pricing strategy be affected by the new EU tariffs in 2018?

Chapter 13: Distribution decisions

13.1: Introduction

13.2: The basic functions of channel participants

13.3: Distributor portfolio analysis

13.4: Developing and managing relationships between manufacturer and distributor

13.5: External and internal determinants of channel decisions

Customer characteristics

Nature of the product

Nature of demand/location

Competition

Legal regulations/local business practices

13.6: The structure of the channel

Market coverage

Channel length

Control/cost

Degree of integration

13.7: From single-channel to omnichannel strategy

13.8: Managing and controlling distribution channels

Screening and selecting intermediaries

Contracting (distributor agreements)

Motivating

Controlling

Termination

13.9: Implications of the internet for distribution decisions

Table of Contents

13.10: Blockchain technology and its influence on marketing and SCM

The marketers use of the blockchain

The use of blockchain technology in SCM provides trust

13.11: Online retail sales

Exhibit 13.1: Maersks use of blockchains in their shipping

13.12: Smart phone marketing

Benefits of m-marketing

Location based app services

13.13: Channel power in international retailing

Exhibit 13.2: The Banana Split model

13.14: Mystery shopping in retailing

13.15: Summary

Case study 13.1: Bosch Indego: how to build B2B and B2C relationships in a new global product market robotic lawnmowers

Chapter 14: Communication decisions

14.1: Introduction

14.2: The communication process

Opinion leadership

Buyer initiative in the communication process

Key attributes of effective communication

Other factors affecting communication

Push versus pull strategies

Mass customisation, one-to-one marketing and the push-pull strategy

14.3: Communication tools

Advertising

Public relations

Exhibit 14.1: LEGO Ninjagos 360-degree marketing communication

Exhibit 14.2: Ambush marketing strategy Dutch brewery vs Anheuser Buschs Budweiser during the FIFA World Cup 2010

Sales promotion

Direct marketing

14.4: Personal selling

The steps in personal selling

Assessing salesforce effectiveness

14.5: Trade fairs and exhibitions

14.6: Social media marketing

Web 2.0

Social media

Table of Contents

From Bowling to Pinball

The 6C model of social media marketing

14.7: Categorisation of social media

The four Social Media categories

14.8: The social media funnel

14.9: Development of the social media marketing plan

Step 1: Conduct a social media audit (where are we today?)

Step 2: Create social media marketing objectives

Step 3: Choose the most relevant social media platforms to work with

Step 4: Get social media inspiration from industry leaders, competitors and key opinion leader in the online community

Step 5: Create a content and time plan for the companys social media efforts

Step 6: Test, evaluate and adjust your social media marketing plan

14.10: Developing a viral marketing campaign

14.11: Summary

Exhibit 14.3: Fox Business (Trish Regan) is selling a political statement

Case study 14.1: Orabrush Inc.: how a pull B2C YouTube marketing strategy helped consumers to focus on the bad breath problem

Part V: Organising, implementing and controlling the marketing effort

Part V: Video case study: Pret A Manger: How to control the expansion of an international restaurant chain

Introduction to part V

Chapter 15: Organising and implementing the marketing plan

15.1: Introduction

15.2: Marketing audit

15.3: Building the marketing plan

Title page

Table of contents

Executive summary

Introduction

Situational analysis

Marketing objectives and goals

Marketing strategies and programmes

Budgets

Implementation and control

Conclusion

15.4: Organising the marketing resources

Table of Contents

Organisational structure

Vertical or horizontal organisation?

Centralised or decentralised organisation?

Bureaucratic or adaptive organisation?

Organisational forms

Transition from a product-focused to a customer-focused structure

Organisational culture

15.5: Implementation of the marketing plan

Issues in marketing implementation

Planning and implementation are interdependent processes

15.6: The role of internal marketing

The internal marketing approach

The internal marketing process

Implementing an internal marketing approach

Exhibit 15.1: Merger of Mars European food, pet care and confectionery divisions

15.7: Summary

Case study 15.1: DJI Technology Co. Ltd.

Chapter 16: Budgeting and controlling

16.1: Introduction

16.2: Budgeting

Profitability analysis

Customer-mix budgets

16.3: Social media metrics

Non-financial social metrics

Other operational non-financial social metrics

Financial social metrics

Other operational financial social metrics

16.4: Customer profitability and customer lifetime value

Realising the full profit potential of a customer relationship

Customer retention

Increasing CLTV

Acquisition costs

16.5: Controlling the marketing programme

Exhibit 16.1: Simulation of firm Xs customer value (cumulative sales for firm X over periods 1 to 10) with different retention rates

Design of a control system

Feedforward control

Key areas for control in marketing

Overall economic value with successful implementation of CRM

Table of Contents

16.6: Summary

Case study 16.1: Huawei smartphones: expanding into the international markets for smartphones

Appendix: Market research and decision support system

A.1: Introduction

A.2: Data warehousing

A.3: Data mining

A.4: The customer information file

A.5: Linking market research to the decision-making process

A.6: Secondary research

Advantages of secondary research

Disadvantages of secondary research

Internal data sources

External data sources

Secondary data used for estimation of foreign market potential

A.7: Primary research

Qualitative and quantitative research

Triangulation: mixing qualitative and quantitative research methods

Research design

Problems with using primary research

A.8: Online (internet) primary research methods

Advantages of online surveys

Disadvantages of online surveys

Online quantitative market research (email and Web-based surveys)

Online qualitative market research

A.9: Other types of market research

Ad-hoc research

Continuous research (longitudinal designs)

Sales forecasting

Scenario planning

A.10: Setting up a marketing information system (MIS)

A.11: Marketing research based on Web 2.0

A.12: Summary

Table of Contents

Glossary

Index

Back Cover